Traditional Chinese painting involves essentially the same techniques as calligraphy and is done with a brush dipped in black or colored ink, typically on paper or silk. The finished work is then mounted on scrolls, which can be hung or rolled up. Traditional painting also is done in albums and on walls, lacquerwork, and other media. Original writings by famous calligraphers have been greatly valued throughout China's history and are mounted on scrolls and hung on walls in the same way that paintings are. Artists from the Han (202 B.C.E.) to the Tang (618-906) dynasties mainly painted the human figure. Paintings included images of immortals, emperors, court ladies, and common people at their work. Artist used different shades of red and green to come with stunning effects. Features These Ganjifa Paintings come under the branch of Indian traditional paintings. Our skilled artisans put their best efforts in making of these paintings. Features: Excellent designs. They approached painting with an objective of expressing themselves. From their time onward, many painters strove to freely express their feelings and to capture the inner spirit of their subject instead of describing its outward appearance. The northern Song emperors were enthusiastic patrons of the arts. Huizong, perhaps the most knowledgeable of all Chinese emperors about the arts, was himself an accomplished calligrapher and a painter chiefly of birds and flowers in the realistic tradition. On the other hand, painters known as Individualists rebelled against many of the traditional rules of painting and found ways to express themselves more directly through free brushwork. The most outstanding of them is a group of Four Monks.
