

Making Sense of the 'Senselessness': Critical Reflections on Killing Rampages

Matthias Dapprich

Keywords: Marxism, Psychology, Morality, Abstract Free Will, Self-Esteem

Abstract

The essay comments on killing rampages from a Marxist perspective and offers provocative conclusions on the reasons for young people to go on killing sprees. In order to achieve this, the author applies the Marxist psychological theory of the "abstract free will" and analyses how a modern individual's consciousness must be shaped to commit a rampage killing. It turns out that individuals, which deal psychologically with the requirements of the capitalistic society, apply the criterion of successful decency to their material and social efforts. Even though this is common among modern individuals and accompanied by adequate psychological and moral "techniques", some radicalise the ideal they have constructed of themselves and the society they live in.

Author Biography

Matthias Dapprich

Ph.D. Candidate History (modern era) School of Humanities University of Glasgow I studied politics, economics and psychology in Bremen, Germany, and Essex, U.K., and currently work on my thesis at Glasgow University. I focus on Germany's New Left, Marxist inspired psychological theories and media analysis.

NEW PROPOSALS

JOURNAL OF MARXISM AND INTERDISCIPLINARY INQUIRY

VOLUME FIVE, NUMBER ONE NOVEMBER 2011

 PDF

Published
2011-07-24

Issue
Vol. 5 No. 1 \(2011\): Capitalism and Indigenous Peoples

Section
Comments and Arguments

Copyright for articles published in this journal is retained by the authors, with first publication rights granted to the journal. By virtue of their appearance in this open access journal, articles are free to use, with proper attribution, in educational and other non-commercial settings.

Open Journal Systems

Information

For Readers

For Authors

For Librarians

Make a Submission

Platform &
workflow by
OJS / PKP

Is that an endorsement of patriarchy or merely a reflection of the sad truth that a man's word carries more weight than a woman's, that women's stories are more believable to hear a man tell them? All of the films mentioned so far have been directed and written by men, and so much of the defining mainstream discourse is via men, too. The Kill Bill movies may provide the catharsis that any rape-revenge movie is capable of doing, but also keep in mind that Tarantino invoked Spice Girls rhetoric when following up on his "feminist statement" statement: He said he made "a film about girl power." Take him seriously at your own risk. Women do have, on occasion, a hand in making these things. (Justin Deschamps) I was able to find a complete copy of the unsealed Ghislaine Maxwell documents that I was able to unredact and put the data in this post. Given the unquestionably important nature of the Ghislaine Maxwell case, a woman who might have the evidence to expose the pedo-deep state; and finally make it clear to the people, once and for all, that there is a criminal syndicate that has infested every walk of life, you would think the powers that be would be very careful. Emotional Intelligence is a guide to making sense of the senselessness. Daniel Goleman worked as a psychologist first then as a journalist for the NYT, and has been tracking the progress of our understanding of the realm of irrationality. From this position, he's been seeing two growing trends: one portraying a growing calamity in our shared emotional life, the other offering some helpful remedies. "Reflections" (2x68) is the sixty-eighth episode of the second campaign of Critical Role. Continuing their crawl through the tomb, the Mighty Nein must tackle a bridge of terrors and come face-to-face with familiar foes Sadly Laura Bailey is ill, so Travis will stand in for her. Sam advertised D&D Beyond by live tweeting as he read the advertising copy. Unfortunately, it went wrong as he had issues with auto-correct on his tablet. Making Sense out of Senselessness. Audio Preview. remove-circle. Share or Embed This Item. EMBED. Making Sense out of Senselessness. by. Paul Williams. Usage. Attribution. Topics. Sermon, Christ Center, 2009, Paul Williams.