

NAVIGATION

RESEARCH

EXPLORE OUR RESEARCH

RESEARCH STUDENTS

ENGAGE WITH US

STRATEGY & ENVIRONMENT

NEWS AND EVENTS

CONTACT US

UCLAN

Preston,
Lancashire, UK
PR1 2HE

Tel: +44 (0) 1772 201
201

OTHER LINKS

Contact UCLan

Visit UCLan

How to find us

What's On

LEGAL

Copyright

Disclaimer

Data

Protection

Freedom Of Information

Charity Status

FOLLOW US

Twitter

Facebook

LinkedIn

Flickr

YouTube

Shipton, Eric. 1969. That Untravalled World. London: Hodder & Stoughton. Shipton, Eric. [1938] 1990. "Blank on the Map." In The Six Mountain-Travel Books, 153-303. London: Diadem Books. Eric Shipton: Everest and Beyond. Jan 1998. Peter Steele. Steele, Peter. 1998. Eric Shipton: Everest and Beyond. London: Constable. Memoir on Maps of Chinese Turkistan and Kansu: From the Surveys Made During Sir Aurel Stein's Explorations 1900-1, 1906-8, 1913-5. Mountains of Tartary presents us with a steganographic text, where secrets, intentional and inadvertent, present new and complex interrelationships for critical analysis to explore at the intersection of travel writing, politics and diplomacy. Eric Earle Shipton, CBE (1 August 1907 – 28 March 1977), was an English Himalayan mountaineer. Shipton was born in Ceylon (now Sri Lanka) in 1907 where his father, a tea planter, died before he was three years old. When he was eight, his mother brought him to London for his education. When he failed the entrance exam to Harrow School, his mother sent him to Pyt House School in Wiltshire. His first encounter with mountains was at 15 when he visited the Pyrenees with his family. The next summer he spent The novel had many different characters, but it is solely based on the live of 6 characters: Richard Papen, Henry Winter, Francis Abernathy, Bunny Corcoran, and Cami and Charles Macauley. Richard is the narrator of the story, and to me has one of the most puzzling personalities in the book. Richard Papen. Richard was born in Plano, California, which is a very small town with little to nothing. His need to feed the loneliness that lives inside of him derives from the fact that his parents don't like him and he has no siblings. His obsession with fitting in also derives from this. Richard