The study's researchers have remained tight-lipped about their findings, but they've dropped plenty of clues that suggest it was the paper's conclusion, not its methodology, that led to the journals' rejections. "We can't start discussing what they are dissatisfied with. For if so, we must also explain what the study showed. A lead investigator on the Danish mask study - the ONLY (as far as I know) randomized trial to see if masks protect from #COVID - was asked when it would be published. His answer: "as soon as a journal is brave enough." If you think that means the study shows masks work pic.twitter.com/tm5PFBa5TL. — Alex Berenson (@AlexBerenson) October 18, 2020. ARCHAEOLOGICAL discoveries in the Middle East shed light on the cruel practices of the Assyrians and Babylonians and can confirm Biblical accounts of their atrocities, a scripture expert has claimed. According to Tom Meyer, a professor in Bible studies at Shasta Bible College and Graduate School in California, there is ample archaeological evidence to prove scripture right. He told Express.co.uk: "Horrific archaeological evidence has come to light that validates the Bible's claim of the violent nature of ancient Near Eastern armies. PART 1 ("THE FACTS"). In late May 1992, Chief Deputy Sheriff Daniel Weyenberg of the McLennan County Sheriff's Department informed the Austin, Texas, ATF office that suspicious United Parcel Service (UPS) deliveries had been received by certain persons residing at the Compound, known as Mount Carmel. The Compound is located a few miles from Waco, which is in McLennan County.
