This book is a synthesis of archaic Egypt. Emery considers the book only an introduction to Nile civilization during the first two dynasties. As most of the archaeology has been of kings' tombs and the records mostly deal with kings, the emphasis in this book is on the early kings. Emery discusses the kings of the first two dynasties, what is known of the government and social classes, the military and weapons, religion (mostly the different gods and what they represented), art, architecture (mostly as found in tombs), building construction, writing, trade, the stone and ceramic industries, metal work, jewelry, leatherwork, agriculture, furniture, and dress.
In Archaic Period, the First. and Second Dynasties unified the the Nile valley to build the kingdom of Egypt and established Memphis as its capital. Characteristic of civilization. Main Topics Rise and fall. ● The pharaoh: military commander and head of government. ● Vizier is the king representative (second in command) coordinated land survey, the treasury, building
