Muse, 'tis enough: at length thy labour ends, And thou shalt live, for Buckingham commends. Thomas E. Maresca, Pope. Benjamin Boyce. https://doi.org/10.1086/390020. Benjamin Boyce, “Pope's Horatian Poems. Thomas E. Maresca, Pope,” Modern Philology 65, no. 4 (May, 1968): 396-397. https://doi.org/10.1086/390020. MOST READ. The Pope of the late poems, particularly those with a Horatian background and collected in the Twickenham edition as Imitations of Horace, is not an easy poet to live with. The explicit self-presentations are too frequent, too favourable, and sometimes too strident, for the reader to feel altogether comfortable with him. This problem is made more acute by the movement in recent decades from aesthetic to biographical or semi-biographical approaches to Pope. The career of Maynard Mack can serve as illustration.
