Edgar Johnson’s two-volume Sir Walter Scott (LJ 6/15/70), still the standard biography though it is out of print, indulges in special pleading for its subject and his books. Sutherland, who has published widely on Victorian literature, is more critical, showing small appreciation for the man or his writing. Sutherland is best in relating the works to Scott’s life and times, for example, when he links the Napoleonic Wars to the battles that culminate each of Scott’s major poems, or when Sutherland argues that the darkness of The Bride of Lammermoor mirrors Scott’s sense of mortality at the time of composition. A good alternative to Sutherland is A.N. Wilson’s thematically arranged The Laird of Abbotsford (Oxford Univ. Pr., 1980).-Joseph Rosenblum, Greensboro, N.C.
