Tree Leaf Talk bursts the constructionist bubble. The book is a passionate appeal for a rigorously down-to-earth anthropology, rooted in the slow, pedestrian rhythms of day-to-day activity through which experience, history and meaning are sedimented in the land.” – Tim Ingold, University of Aberdeen. “Freed from the descriptor, ‘A heideggerian Anthropology’, Tree leaf talk can then be read as a careful demonstration of the power of something like ‘an allegorical anthropology.” – University of Technology Sydney. “A powerful, dense and vital contribution to anthropology.” – Journal of Anthropology.
