Abstract

Giraffe is so bored that he decides to do something about it. Pelican is starting a new mail service, so Giraffe decides to write a letter to whomever it reaches on the other side of the horizon. Pelican delivers the letter to Seal, who then delivers the letter to Penguin. Even though Giraffe does not know what Penguin looks like and Penguin doesn't know what Giraffe looks like, they continue to send each other letters and become great friends! Giraffe decides to visit his new friend, so he dresses up in what he thinks Penguin looks like. When Giraffe arrives, Penguin doesn't think Giraffe looks like a penguin at all, but they are happy to see each other!

Giraffe is bored. So when he sees a sign announcing a new mail delivery, he decides to write a letter. He instructs Pelican, the delivery service, to deliver the letter to the first animal he sees when he reaches the horizon. The letter eventually makes it to Penguin. Penguin has never heard of a giraffe, but decides to write back and find out what a neck is. And so begins a long-distance friendship that may or may not result in a party. "Yours Sincerely, Giraffe" by Megumi Iwasa is recommended for grades 1-4. Author: Megumi Iwasa Illustrator: Jun Takabatake Translator: Cathy Hirano. Out on the African savannah, Pelican is setting up a new business: Pelican Post. Giraffe, who is feeling a bit bored and alone, decides to write a letter, and asks Pelican to deliver it to the first animal he meets on the other side of the horizon. Pelican flies a long, long way and eventually the letter reaches an inquisitive young penguin who's studying at Whale Point School, far out in the ocean. Yours Sincerely, Giraffe is a funny tale of mistaken assumptions and friendship from afar. Buy the eBook. List Price. $9.99 USD. Your price. $8.69 USD. Add to cart. Yours Sincerely, Giraffe By Megumi Iwasa, Illustrations by Jun Takabatake. Giraffe is bored and longs for a friend. Pelican is bored and offers to deliver letters. Although Giraffe has never written a letter, he decides to give it a try. Pelican flies Giraffe's letter beyond the horizon to a faraway place called Whale Sea. Seal is the letter carrier there, and he chooses Penguin to be the recipient of Giraffe's letter. Soon, a correspondence begins! But Giraffe has never heard of a penguin and Penguin has never heard of a giraffe.
